

JEROME ARGUES CASE OF PERKINS

Remarkable Attempt of New York District Attorney to Shield a Wrong-Doer.

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

JUSTICE ASKS MANY POINTED QUESTIONS.

New York, March 30.—Arguments in the habeas corpus proceedings in the case of George W. Perkins, former vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, who is charged in a warrant issued by Magistrate Moss with the larceny of $48,702 belonging to the policyholders of the New York Life, which he advanced to Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican national committee, were made today before Justice Greenbaum in the state supreme court. Decision was reserved. Briefs will be filed Monday by defending counsel, and then Justice Greenbaum will take the matter of the legality of Mr. Perkins' arrest under advisement.

Jerome's Argument.
District Attorney Jerome argued for the prosecution and former Judge William N. Cohen and Lewis Delaford appeared for the defendant. Justice Greenbaum took the liveliest interest in the argument, and constantly interrupted the lawyers with pointed questions.

Mr. Jerome said that criminal intent, according to legal authorities, was to appear from all the circumstances of the case.
"The question here," he continued, "is as to the right of Mr. Perkins to take the money of the policyholders to a political organization for the purpose of influencing the results of certain political matters at the polls."

Moral Guilt Clear.
"This is very far from being a case where there is an absence of moral guilt or turpitude. Shall the officers of a corporation, or a single officer, take the money of the policyholders, take your and my money, and give it to a political party? I say that such an act is inherently wrong, whether it is prohibited by law or not. I say that it is contrary to public policy, contrary to public morality, and contrary, as well, to private morality and common decency. Half of the policyholders may have been Democrats, and take their money to assist the Republican party certainly goes to the establishment of felonious intent."

Justice Greenbaum asked: "If you maintain that this was an illegal act in what classification do you put it?"
Mr. Jerome replied: "I think that the payment was both illegal and immoral. I claim that it was both, and that it was criminal."

Judge Cohen's Plea.
Drawing a parallel in justification of the payment of money to the Republican campaign committee, Judge Cohen said that President John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance company had at different times directed the payment of large sums of money for the relief of the Johnstown flood sufferers and for use in a yellow fever epidemic in New Orleans. These payments may have been outside the vested authority of the president, he said, but surely not illegal; certainly very far from criminal.
"Mr. McCall," he said, "held great funds in his possession and he used them for public benefits. He believed sincerely that when he directed the payment of this money to Mr. Perkins he was acting for the best interests of the policyholders of his company. Outside of his vested authority, perhaps, but not illegal; certainly not criminal."

It was then explained to the court that Mr. Perkins had advanced his personal funds to Mr. Bliss and had been repaid months afterward by the New York Life.
"Is it common sense," asked Judge Cohen, "to charge a man with having stolen from another when he is repaid his own? Mr. Perkins believed he was doing the best thing for his company, and it is at his request that I make this further statement. In saying that he acted throughout under the direction of Mr. McCall, Mr. Perkins has not the slightest idea of attributing to Mr. McCall any except the highest motives, or any wish or idea except to protect the interests of the policyholders."

Judge Cohen argued that none of the code definitions of larceny applied to Mr. Perkins' case. When he read the clause treating with improper payment by officers of corporations having control of such payments, Justice Greenbaum asked:

Question by the Court.
"Do you mean to claim that a president of a corporation cannot be said to be an officer having control of funds, within the meaning of the statute; that the only officers so included are those who actually draw the checks?"

"I think that is the meaning of the law," replied Judge Cohen.
"So narrow as that?" commented Justice Greenbaum.

"I think the purport of the law is as sensible as that," rejoined the lawyer.
Justice Greenbaum then asked whether Judge Cohen thought that his interpretation would shield from conviction an officer who accepted money wrongfully given to him or paid to him by check by an officer having that authority.

Justice Cohen said that if criminal wrongdoing was charged it was covered by other provisions of the penal code, but he maintained that it would not be larceny under the code.

Justice Makes a Remark.

Justice Greenbaum remarked: "I merely wished fully to understand your contention."
Later he said: "A man's motive may be perfectly good, and yet he may be guilty of crime."

Judge Cohen replied that there is a distinction between motive and intent, and he declared that criminal intent is essential in proving the commission of a crime.

During Mr. Jerome's reply to the arguments for Mr. Perkins, Justice Greenbaum asked:

"Do you maintain that it is unlawful to contribute the funds of a company for such purpose as is covered by this case?"

"The money of the policyholders," replied the district attorney.
"But do you say that of contributions from any sort of company?"

Immoral in Highest Degree.
"Oh, as to limited liability companies when a father and members of his family are the only stockholders—no," said Mr. Jerome. "But with any great corporation or trust company I say it is immoral in the highest degree to divert its funds without the consent of every party in interest."

"Have you any authorities to submit in support of that view—any authorities relating to any similar acts or gifts to other than political organizations?"
"I have not. We have searched diligently, but this appears to be the first instance of such an issue having arisen. It would appear that your honor will have to pass upon the question as to whether there was a felonious intent, without the assistance of such authorities."

Judge Hiram G. Bond.
Seattle, Wash., March 30.—From the results of a fall last Sunday morning, Judge Hiram G. Bond died last evening at his home in this city. The immediate cause of his death was apoplexy, superinduced, his physicians believe, by his exertions in aiding Miss Ada Hanford, his riding companion, who fell from her horse during the ride. The pair were near the end of the Lake Washington boulevard when Miss Hanford's mount stumbled and threw her to the ground. Judge Bond quickly dismounted and ran to the assistance of Miss Hanford, who is a daughter of Federal Judge C. H. Hanford. As he started to remount his steed, Judge Bond became a trifle dizzy and fell to the ground. Because of his advanced years, Judge Bond failed rapidly after the accident, and Monday and Tuesday physicians worked over him in an effort to save him, but on Tuesday his condition grew worse, and Thursday all hope was given up.

SKY-SCRAPER TO COST $1,000,000

In his travels Mr. Phipps has circled the globe. While in India recently he gave Viceroy Curzon $50,000 for charitable purposes. Mr. Phipps' reputation for giving to hospitals and charities is world wide. He makes a specialty of giving to hospitals and charities. In this respect he is unlike his former partner, Andrew Carnegie, the giver of libraries.

With a fortune estimated at from $15,000,000 to $100,000,000, and with that fortune rapidly increasing through careful investment, Mr. Phipps is reckoned one of the richest men in the world today. He made most of his money in the building of the Carnegie, the firm name being for many years, "Carnegie, Phipps & Co." This partnership was dissolved in 1892, the time of the formation of the steel trust. Born of poor parents, and with only a meager education, Mr. Phipps began early his career as a laborer in one of the small steel and iron manufacturing establishments near Pittsburgh, Pa. After years of hard work and close application he became intimate with Andrew Carnegie, later forming the partnership which until now has been so rich.

Mr. Phipps is Mr. Carnegie's nephew. Just about all of the other fifty odd men who became immensely wealthy through their connection with Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Phipps on the formation of the steel trust moved his residence to New York. There he has lived for the past ten years.

Long Interested in Salt Lake.
Mr. Phipps first became interested in Salt Lake some twenty odd years ago. While he was on a trip through the west he was in the city, and during that time he made several investments, to which he added gradually until now he has a fortune in property in this city. The income derived from his Salt Lake holdings is said to be about $100,000 a year.

The Phipps party will probably be in Salt Lake for another day and possibly two days before going to Denver.

MINERS ADJOURN: STRIKE CERTAIN

details of managing the strike. It was empowered to decide as to what employees would be allowed to continue work at the mines to prevent the destruction of the property during the suspension. There is in the national, district and local treasuries of the miners, $2,500,000, of which $400,000 is in the national treasury.

President Mitchell expects to leave Sunday for New York to meet in joint conference with the anthracite operators.

The convention today failed to expel Patrick Dolan and Uriah Bellingham, the Pittsburgh district officials, from the organization, by a vote of 450 to 553. The controversy was referred back to the Pittsburgh district.

President Mitchell had absolute control of the convention throughout its sessions, and every act desired by him was done. He signified today that if the convention did not adopt the resolution permitting the miners to sign wherever the advance scale was paid he would resign. The vote was unanimous, although Vice President Lewis took a vigorous position against it.

STRIKE WILL BE SHORT.

Western Pennsylvania Miners Will Get Advance.

Pittsburgh, March 30.—General sentiment in the Pittsburgh district is that the bituminous coal field tonight, based upon the news of the action of the miners' convention at Indianapolis, is that while a strike is now inevitable, it will be of short duration. By the adoption of the resolution permitting miners to sign the 1903 wage scale wherever it is offered by the operators, the way is opened for the restoration of the western Pennsylvania mine, 33 per cent of which are controlled by the Pittsburgh Coal company. Disputes tonight from various points where there has been trouble announce the restoration of the 1903 scale and intention of striking miners to return to work Monday morning under that scale.

Robbins Will Operate.
Francis L. Robbins, chairman of the executive board of the Pittsburgh Coal company, has been foremost among the operators in the movement to restore the 1903 scale, and it is now practically assured that this company will operate its mines, strike or no strike.

It is expected, however, that a thirty-day suspension of lease will be called in this district. This, it is stated, will be done in order that the large stocks of coal that industrial plants and railroads have been accumulating in anticipation of a general strike, be reduced and a return to normal conditions obtained. It was said tonight that probably no definite step would be taken until the return of Mr. Robbins from Indianapolis.

WILL PAY THE LIGHT BILL

Baker Convinces Mercer Council That Light Charge is Not Exorbitant.

Mercer, March 29.—Fervent to the call of the mayor, W. Evans, the Mercer council met last Monday evening in extra session to consider the question of lighting the city. The bill for lighting the city during the month of February had been presented, but owing to a raise in the price of gas for lighting and some question regarding the franchise under the Teluride company, under the local management, the bill had been tabled.

Mr. Baker, learning of this action, promptly notified the mayor and council that if the bill was not paid within a reasonable time the lights would be cut off.

In the session Monday evening every phase of the lighting question was considered minutely. Mr. Baker bringing into the council a number of a mass of documentary evidence extending back to the years when the town was still young, by the aid of which he convinced every member of the council that the bill rendered by him was not extortionate and that the Teluride company had a legal right to do business under a franchise purchased from Mr. Jacobs by said company. The matter being cleared up to the satisfaction of all, an order of motion was made by which a short address was made by Bishop J. W. Lee, in which the many lovely traits in the character of the deceased were dwelt upon.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful in design. One of the most notable was a beautiful wreath presented by the pupils of the young lady's school room, in which sixteen carnations, representing the years of her life, were entwined with sprigs of evergreen. All the members of the family accompanied the remains to Provo, except the father, who remained in Salt Lake City.

Sidney Reeves, who has been spending a few days visiting in Salt Lake City, is back at his post again.

She was 58 years of age and had been ill for some time. Mrs. Bodham was born in Summerville, Eng. land, Jan. 1, 1848, and emigrated to Utah with her husband, J. M. Bodham, in 1881, having joined the L. D. S. church about that time, and continued a member of it until her death. She has two living sons and eight grandchildren. The funeral services were held in the Second ward meeting house at 2 o'clock, in the presence of a large number of friends. Miss Maud Chapman, who died at the Palmer rooming house in Salt Lake City, was buried in the Payson City cemetery yesterday.
